Part-time Position Available in Psychology

A part-time position is available at the Yale Psychology Department Clinic (YPDC; 405 Temple Street) for a CT licensed clinical psychologist with experience supervising graduate students in the provision of intake assessments (with the SCID-5), psychotherapy, and psychological assessment and with experience with anti-racist clinical training. The position is for one or two semesters starting as soon as January 1, 2021 with the possibility of renewal based on performance and funding. Duties include: individual supervision, group supervision, and participation in weekly treatment team meetings. Supervision requires video review of students’ assessment and treatment sessions. YPDC provides evidence-based treatments (individual and group) to clients with primarily anxiety and mood disorders. Licensed clinical psychologists with expertise in evidence-based assessment and treatment and a strong background in culturally-sensitive and anti-racist approaches are well suited for this position. Remote work would be possible during spring, 2021, subject to change based on COVID-19 policies, but supervisor must be located in CT. Yale University is an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity employer. Yale values diversity among its students, staff, and faculty and strongly welcomes applications from historically excluded racial groups, women, persons with disabilities, and protected veterans.

To apply, please send a cover letter, CV, and two letters of reference to Dr. Mary O’Brien at m.obrien@yale.edu. In your cover letter please be sure to include a description of how taking an anti-racism approach informs your clinical supervision.
